UGC (University Grants Commission) introduced the “History of the Emergence of Independent Bangladesh” as a Compulsory Course in 2014 under the guidance of the Government of the People's Republic of Bangladesh in review of History in every Public and private University to awaken the sense of nationalism in every student. In this regard how much contribution does the BDS course make to ensure enriching a student's patriotism? Give your opinion in 200 words.

My opinion:

In Bangladesh, the University Grants Commission (UGC) has made "History of the Emergence of Independent Bangladesh" a mandatory course. This decision demonstrates the government's concerted efforts to instill a sense of pride and nationalism among students. The objective of the course is to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of the struggles, sacrifices, and historical context that led to Bangladesh's independence. This course serves as an excellent platform for students to connect with the past of our country. Additionally, such a curriculum can inspire a sense of responsibility among us to uphold the values of independence, democracy, and social justice. By teaching students to critically analyze historical events, this course encourages them to draw connections between past struggles and present challenges. By providing an in-depth understanding of the challenges faced during the independence movement, students may develop a greater commitment to preserving these hard-earned freedoms and actively participating in the nation's progress.. After completing this course, my knowledge about my heritage has significantly expanded. It has also equipped me with critical thinking skills that will be valuable in my future endeavors. Students are likely to feel more a part of their country and more accountable for upholding its ideals and advancing it if they have a thorough comprehension of this historical narrative.. Therefore, I believe that the UGC's decision to implement this course is a necessary step for the development of our young generation.
